Abstract

Diapering is an unfortunate task that all parents have to suffer. Therefore, society has found and become accustomed to the disposable diapers, the cleanest and fastest way to get around the dirty task. The environmental and financial analysis of each diaper available on the market has shown that all-in-one cloth diapers are just as easy to use as disposable diapers, yet saves money and the environment. I create a promotional package available at nicerdiaper.weebly.com, where potential promoters can spread the word and help our environment and therefore, all kids.

Acknowledgments

I would like to thank Paige Waters for advising me through this project. Her help during this long and difficult task was only a small fraction of the help and guidance I received during my four-year college career.
